English Statesman Says Great Britain Says
England and United States Will Lead

FOR PROGRESS OF ALL UNIVERSE

Expects the Two Great Nations to Join Hands for the Advancement of the Whole World.

(Special by Scripps-McLain.)

New York, Nov. 16.—John Morley, the English statesman, was one of the speakers at the annual dinner of the New York chamber of commerce. He declared he was as enthusiastic as any one in Chicago on the night of the election when he made a tour of the voting booths and visited the newspaper offices to see how the returns were handled. He predicted that in all great emergencies the United States and Great Britain would be found fighting side by side.

"I confess I greatly impressed my imagination," said Mr. Morley, "and stirred me to think that in this vast country within a few hours the voice of the people, right or wrong, would be so emphatically and so unmistakably ascertained."

"Frankly, I rejoice to hear from the secretary of the treasury that your hopes are buoyant, and that you are prosperous. Why, that is a thing that struck me most in my rapid transit through important trade centers in this country—the enormous and unbounded strength of your material resources—and, being a good natured people, let me say that I have seen nothing—don't hoot me out of the room—I have seen nothing, no evidence during this run through some of the centers of your country, to make me believe you would not have been just as great, just as mighty—I mean in industrial competition—as you are today, if you had taken that worst of subjects, as I am told—no tariff excepting for purposes of revenue."

"Towards a Delicate Ground."
"Well, if that is all the tendency that comes of testifying I do not think I need have taken the trouble to have testified, because I gather that a good many of you at all events have some doubts as to the matter. And now, this is the last remark I will make."

upon that delicate ground, which is less delicate than I thought it would be (laughter), though it may be that I am so stupid or so stubborn or so much of a doctrinaire—a name I am well acquainted with—as to doubt whether you would not have been just as well off if you had taken that formula."

Towards the end of the address Mr. Morley said:
"It would be most unbecoming of me to say a word as to the personality of your president. I will say this in passing that it is gratifying to me to find that a man may write a book about Oliver Cromwell and yet be thought a good man to whom to trust the destinies of a nation."

"I rejoiced to think, and I do think, that in the great questions and emergencies that may arise Great Britain and the United States will both by interests and by sentiment be found side by side."

Will Fight Side by Side.
"I believe from the bottom of my heart that for the progress of the world, for the civilization of mankind, we will fight side by side for those ideals and those questions which are common to us and common to you."

Mr. Morley's speech was received with great enthusiasm. It was over ten minutes before the applause subsided.

The other speakers of the evening were Leslie M. Shaw, secretary of the treasury; Richard Olney and Sir James Kitson, M. P. Morris K. Jesup presided.

Secretary Shaw in his address said money is plenty, crops abundant and prices good, and on this account warned the business world against either "reckless optimism" or "blind pessimism." He hoped the country would be saved from either extreme.

Mr. Olney said the basis of all true arbitration is the confidence of the parties in each other's honesty of purpose.

Uncle Sam—As I was saying, John, you can't always tell when they'll give that a push our way.

TAGGART TALKS ON DEMOCRACY

Says Western Headquarters Will Be Continued in Indianapolis.

(Special by Scripps-McLain.)

Indianapolis, Nov. 16.—National Democratic Chairman Taggart arrived from New York today. He announced the permanent democratic headquarters are to be maintained at the Belmont building. Several important conferences are to be held in the near future. He declined to say who will attend the conferences.

SPARKS FROM THE WIRES

Albert Relyea, aged 50, chief of the redemption division in the office of the treasurer of the United States in Washington yesterday shot himself while at his desk, because of poor health, and died later at a hospital.

The will of the late Eldridge M. Fowler of Pasadena, Cal., gives the widow $500,000 and valuable real estate. Nearly $1,000,000 goes to two daughters, a son-in-law and nephew, and there are large charitable bequests.

Relatives of Miss Florence Yocum, who, with her father, Harry C. Yocum, was lost in the wreck of the Yocum yacht in the Gulf of Mexico in January, 1899, began suit yesterday in St. Louis against Martin V. Kaeor, administrator of the estate, making allegations of fraud.

Frank W. Higgins, governor-elect of New York, is at Cambridge Springs, Pa., where he will remain a few days recuperating.

Bishop Samuel Fallows of Chicago has just been appointed chaplain of the Second Infantry, Illinois National Guard, with rank of captain.

Chairman George B. Cortelyou of the republican national committee had a brief interview with President Roosevelt yesterday after the cabinet meeting.

Ten persons were injured in a collision of the Chicago express, west-bound, on the Grand Trunk railroad and a light pilot engine near St. Catharines, Ont., yesterday.

Entertainment: After the regular meeting of the Fraternal Reserve association at the West Side Odd Fellows' hall tomorrow evening there will be a free entertainment for the members and their friends.

PITIFUL SCENE IN A COURT ROOM

Woman Testifies Against Her Former Husband's Character.

(Special by Scripps-McLain.)

Madison, Wis., Nov. 16.—A pathetic scene was enacted in the municipal court-room in this city yesterday after Mrs. George Benway had finished testifying against her divorced husband, George Benway, who is charged with assault with intent to kill. The woman was on the witness stand for two hours. Her strength gave out and she fainted away. Officers carried her to a corner of the room where her two little boys, aged 11 and 13 respectively, gathered around and wept bitterly. Benway sat beside his attorney and occasionally glanced at the woman, but he showed no sympathy toward her. Last August Benway shot his wife and then turned the weapon upon himself. They were taken to the hospital but have recovered. Jealousy caused him to commit the act. The couple was recently divorced.

STRIKERS TAKE DECIDED STAND

Attack the Docks of the Transatlantic Compagnie With Much Violence.

(Special by Scripps-McLain.)

Havre, Nov. 16.—The striking carters attacked the docks of Compagnie transatlantique this morning, but were repulsed by the soldiers. The mayor has issued a proclamation forbidding processions in the streets.

STATE NOTES

The county board went into session at Waushara yesterday. The vote on the chairman was a deadlock, the twenty-second ballot being: W. J. Jones, Waushara, 7; G. D. Powell, Summit, 5; Thomas McCarthy, Landon, 12. The latter is democrat.

A. G. Tower of Chicago has begun the erection of a large summer house on the shores of Silver Lake, Kenosha county, and he will make an effort to break the hold of the other ice companies of the county. The house will have a capacity of 210,000 tons.

O. G. Nelson of Chicago is at the head of a company which has just begun the erection of a large summer resort and hotel on the east bank of Camp Lake, Kenosha county. The hotel will cost more than $100,000 and will be opened to the public about May 15.

A large number of farmers at Yorkville and Mount Pleasant held a meeting at Racine yesterday and took preliminary steps to organize a drainage district under the state law. The purpose is to drain marsh lands in the two towns at a cost of about $15,000.

John Dunne, Jr., who was convicted of manslaughter in the third degree at Prairie du Chien last May, was sentenced to two years' hard labor in the state prison at Waupun. The sentence will not be executed until the supreme court has passed on the case. Dunne will be held under heavy bonds to appear next May.

After having been missing for two weeks, the body of Nick Nelson, workman, was found yesterday in the bottom lands south of La Crosse. He had met business reverses and it is believed drowned himself.

RICH WOMAN QUITS CHURCH

Founder of Roman Catholic University at Washington, Renounces Her Faith.

GAVE LARGE SUM TO THE SCHOOLS

Turns Over One-Third of Her Fortune of $2,000,000 to Educational Institutions in Endeavor To Advance the Clergy.

(Special by Scripps-McLain.)

Washington, Nov. 16.—The Marquise des Monstiers Merinville, formerly Miss M. G. Caldwell of Illinois, founder of the Roman Catholic university in this city for the education of priests, has renounced the faith.

The news of her act, which came from Rome, was of such a character that friends in this city cabled her to know whether she had been correctly quoted by a news agency. She replied that the interview was correct and expressed a desire that it be given wide publicity throughout America.

In order to satisfy himself upon the subject, Rector O'Connell of the university cabled Rome for information.

Bishop Spalding of Peoria is in this city to attend a meeting of the trustees of the university. When asked if he could assign any reason for the marquise's action he answered that he could not; that he knew her only as a good Catholic, and until the announcement was made had given no thought otherwise. "It is all a mystery to me," he said.

One official of the Catholic church attributed as a possible cause, taking the story to be correct, the notoriety which the university gained by the failure of Thomas E. Waggaman, its treasurer, by which the institution suffered considerable financial loss.

Says She Was Influenced.

The marquise said to her Roman interviewer: "Yes, it is true that I have left the Roman Catholic church. Since I have been living in Europe my eyes have been opened to what that church really is, and to its anything but sanctity. But the trouble goes much further back than this. Being naturally religious, my imagination was early caught by the idea of doing something to lift the church from the lowly position which it occupied in America, so I thought of a university or higher school where its clergy could be educated, and, if possible, refined."

"Of course in this I was greatly influenced by Bishop Spalding of Peoria, who represented it to me as one of the greatest works of the day. When I was 21 I turned over to them one-third of my fortune, for that purpose. But for years I have been trying to rid myself of the subtle yet overwhelming influence of a church which pretends not only to the privilege of being the only true church, but of being the only true church."

RUSSIAN VESSEL ARRIVES AT CHEE FOO TO DISARM

The Entire Fleet Is Also Reported To Have Slipped Out Under Cover of Night.

(Special by Scripps-McLain.)

Chefoo, Nov. 16.—It is reported here this evening that the entire Russian fleet at Port Arthur has escaped with a torpedo destroyer which arrived last night. There is no confirmation of the report. The commander of the Russian destroyer, whose name is Pien, in an interview today said that not only the Liao Tshan forts, but all the important positions around Port Arthur were controlled by the Russians. He said the Japanese had made no gains recently. The commander asserts there is sufficient food, ammunition and coal at Port Arthur to last a year. The Russian destroyer Ratatropatny, which was pursued into Chefoo harbor last night by the Japanese cruisers after running the blockade at Port Arthur, will remain in the harbor until the close of the war, according to the statements of her officers to the Chinese officials. It is believed the destroyer brought important dispatches from Port Arthur informing the Russian authorities of the dire stress of the besieged garrison.

St. Petersburg, Nov. 16.—The captain of the Ratatropatny has advised St. Petersburg of his arrival at Chefoo with the dispatches from General Stoessel and Rear Admiral Wiren. These have been transmitted to the emperor but are not yet made public.

O'DEA IS TO BE COACH NO MORE

Prospects Are That University Will Be Without His Services.

(Special by Scripps-McLain.)

Milwaukee, Wis., Nov. 16.—The announcement was made this morning that Andy O'Dea will not train the Wisconsin university football eleven next season. This will prove a surprise at this time, as it was not expected that any changes would be made in that direction. Just now, however, O'Dea stated this morning that he would not train the team next season as he will not be in position to handle the work.

There is also an uncertainty about O'Dea handling the crew next year, as Andy says he may not return to Wisconsin at all, although nothing definite has been settled upon regarding the crew as yet. Should he decline to handle the crew it would necessitate securing another man for the position—in all probability a professional, although there might be a chance for McConville. There has been talk of getting Keene Fitzpatrick of Michigan to take O'Dea's place, but there is little chance of getting him, as Coach Yost of Michigan will retain "Fitz" if possible.

Daughter of Breckinridge Beauty.
The Marquise des Monstiers Merinville, formerly Miss Mary Gwendolin Caldwell, is the daughter of William Shakespeare Caldwell, who after being a theatrical manager in England settled in Richmond, Va., and eventually made a large fortune by building gas houses in Chicago, St. Louis, Mobile and other cities. He married Miss Breckinridge, a famous Kentucky beauty.

Shortly before his death Miss Caldwell became a convert to Roman Catholicism and left his children to the care of Irish Roman Catholics in New York, whom she had met in church circles.

Miss Caldwell, previous to her marriage to the Marquis des Monstiers Merinville, a French nobleman, at the age of 25 was a very devoted Roman Catholic, showing her love for the church by giving $200,000 of her inheritance, which amounted to $2,000,000, for the erection of the local divinity college, known as "The Mary Gwendolin Caldwell Hall of Divinity."

Bishop Spalding an Old Friend.
Bishop Spalding of Peoria was an old friend of the family, the guardian and administrator of the estate. He pronounced the marriage ceremony of Miss Caldwell on Oct. 19, 1896, in St. Joseph's church, Avenue Hoche, Paris.

Little was known of the Marquis des Monstiers Merinville at the time of his marriage, with the exception of the fact that he was chronicled in the "Annuaire de Noblesse" as dating his title from 1754, the rank of count having been given his ancestors in 1766.

Some seven years previous to her marriage Miss Caldwell was engaged to Prince Murat, grandson of the king of Naples. The engagement was broken because the prince insisted that half of Miss Caldwell's fortune should be settled upon him.

Miss Caldwell and her sister Lina spent the summers at Newport, where they had a magnificent house, and usually passed part of the winter, when they were not abroad, in New York.

PRIMARY APPLIES TO PRESENT CASE

LAWYERS DECLARE THAT STATE WILL GOVERN SELECTIONS.

MUST BE HELD NEXT JANUARY

Is Operative From Now On—Election Must Take Place Two Weeks Before Legislature Begins Work.

That a special primary election will be held on Jan. 10 in order to nominate party candidates for United States senator to be elected at the forthcoming session of the legislature is the opinion of well-known lawyers of Milwaukee, who ever since the adoption of the referendum vote Tuesday, Nov. 8, have been looking into the statute with a view of determining its applicability to the present senatorial contest. There is a unanimity of opinion to the effect that the law is now in full force and effect, and that its provisions must be complied with to secure senatorial candidates.

Points Which Conclusions Are Based Upon. The points on which the attorneys base their conclusions may be summarized as follows:

Section 26 of the act provides that "if approved by a majority of the votes cast upon that question it shall go into effect and be in force from and after such ratification by the people." This ratification has taken place, and the official canvass of the vote will merely determine and provide evidence of the existence of that fact. The act is put in force, not by this determination, but by the fact of the ratification and dates from such ratification.

Under this act there can be no party candidate for the office of United States senator unless he is nominated pursuant to the provisions of the primary law.

Governs Election of Senator. Subdivision 3 of section 2 reads: "Party candidates for the office of United States senator shall be nominated in the manner herein provided for the nomination of candidates for state officers." The word "shall" means, "must."

This provision applies to the senator to be elected in January next, as well as the senator to be elected in January, 1909. Judging from the form of ballot provided for in the act it was contemplated that the senator should be nominated at the September primary. The law, however, does not so provide.

The September primary (section 3) is held for the nomination only of candidates "to be voted for at the next November election," and the case of a senator comes within the second subdivision of this section, which requires the primary for the nomination of any candidate who is not voted for at the ensuing November election to be held "two weeks before the election for which such primary is held."

Senatorial Election Is in January. The election of United States senator is held, or begun at least, at a fixed date in January, which will fall this year on Jan. 24, and this law expressly requires the primary election to be held at the time indicated for the nomination of candidate for senator.

This is mandatory, and can no more be disobeyed than any other mandate contained in the law. It may be urged that there is no provision for calling such a primary, but this objection is not entitled to weight because there is no provision for the calling of any primary except the September primary.

Opinion of Joseph B. Doe. "I have been considering the question of the applicability of the primary election law to the present senatorial election," said Joseph B. Doe, a former Janesville attorney, in discussing the question, "and I am firmly of the opinion that there can be no party candidate for the office of senator unless he is selected at a primary, held under the term of the new law."

"The new law is in force. Under its own terms it provides that it shall be in full force and effect from the time of its adoption by the people. It also provides in terms that candidates for United States senator must be selected at a primary election. In the same manner as state officers. It does not say, however, that they must be selected at the September primary. In fact, the September primary explicitly is declared to be for the purpose of nominating officers to be voted for at the election in November following. The senator is not elected at the November election, but is chosen by the legislature in January."

Must Call Primary Election. "Therefore the portion of the statute providing for a primary election for other than the November elections applies in this case, and must be called at least two weeks before, the date set for the legislature to begin its balloting for senator. "I do not see how the law can be held to apply to the senatorial election of 1907, and not to the election which is now approaching. If the primary election law is ever to be in force it is in force now. If it ever is to apply at this time. There is but one conclusion to be reached in the matter, and that is that a primary election must be called to nominate the various party candidates for the position now filled by Joseph V. Quarles."

MAKING READY TO CELEBRATE DAY

Exposition Management Are Planning for the Thanksgiving Crowds.

St. Louis.—Thanksgiving week at the world's fair will be rounded off with a visit from President Roosevelt, Vice-President-Elect Fairbanks and members of the cabinet on Saturday, November 26. More than a score of colleges and universities have accepted invitations to participate in the exercises planned for the six days and the season will be enlivened by many social functions, athletic events and special ceremonies.

On Thanksgiving day, Thursday, November 24, all business will be suspended in St. Louis and the people will join in the exercises at the world's fair. Appropriate services will be held in observance of the event at Festival hall and in the afternoon a football contest will be waged on the Stadium grounds between the Haskell Indian school team of Lawrence, Kan., and the Washington university eleven of St. Louis.

For the six days of Thanksgiving week there will be a relaxation from study and an opportunity given to students and teachers to pay a final visit to the exposition. The period will be one exceptionally favorable for an educational rally and carnival of college sports and amusements, such as is planned.

Inaugurating the series of football contests, a game traditionally associated with Thanksgiving festivities, will be a gridiron battle between the McKendree and St. Louis universities teams on Monday, November 21. Other events are being arranged, but have not been officially announced.

Information has been received that the Chicago board of education has given permission for all teachers in the city schools to attend the exposition during Thanksgiving week and the committee on arrangements has provided special programs for their entertainment. Those who have previously visited the world's fair will pay a second visit to complete their inspection of favorite exhibits and those who have not been here before will take advantage of this last opportunity.

Col. A. M. Jackson, president of the Western Military academy at Upper Allen, Ill., has written to Charles M. Reeves, chief of the department of domestic exploration, that a corps of cadets from that institution will attend the exposition in a body on Tuesday, November 22. They have been invited to give an exhibition drill on the Plaza of St. Louis. Shurtzoff college will also send a delegation from the same city.

President Smith of the Illinois Wesleyan university, in an enthusiastic friend of the exposition and he has assured the world's fair management that there will be a good percentage of his 800 students present during Thanksgiving week. Logan university will be likewise represented. President Miller of the board of trustees has brought the matter favorably before the faculty and urged the attendance of as many of the students as possible.

Various institutions and the University of Chicago are two of the big schools that will be represented. Dr. F. W. Gunsulius, president of the former institution, and Mr. H. P. Judson, President Harper's assistant at the University of Chicago, have taken the matter up in their schools.

Concordia college at Springfield, Knox college at Galesburg, and the University of Illinois at Urbana will be among the other Illinois schools represented. Butler college at Indianapolis, Ind., and Central university at Danville, Ky., have accepted invitations.

From Drury college at Springfield, Mo., and Depauw university at Greencastle, Ind., bodies of students, accompanied by their teachers, will come to spend Thanksgiving among the sights and scenes at the world's fair. Fisk university of Nashville, Tenn., and the State college at Ames, Ia., are among other notable schools to take part.

President Hartzog of the Arkansas State university has given leave of absence to all students who desire to attend the world's fair Thanksgiving week and with Mrs. Hartzog he will pay a second visit to the exposition. Maddox seminary will send a large delegation of young ladies from Little Rock to represent that institution at the congress of colleges.

Among other schools to be represented are: Oberlin college, Oberlin, O.; Purdue university, Lafayette, Ind.; Vanderbilt university, Nashville, Tenn.; Washburn college, Topeka, Kas.; University of Notre Dame, Notre Dame, Ind.; University of Missouri, Columbia; Kansas university, Lawrence; and University of the South, at Nashville, Tenn.

HUNTING AT LAKE KOSHKONONG GOOD

Ducks Are Now Plentiful—Rabbit Hunting Is Excellent, and Hunters Have Been Successful.

"Duck hunting at Lake Koshkonong for the past week has been excellent and several hundreds from this city who have visited the shores and weedy shallows of that body of water have returned with strings of mallards, blue bills and geese which are now feeding there. The warmer turn in the weather of the last few days has not been favorably received in hunting circles for only a turn for colder conditions will bring down the larger birds from the north. By Thanksgiving day, if the weather man sees fit to prescribe a flurry of snow and send the mercury down the thermometer tube there will be a great number of ducks brought down by hunters. One who was there the last week reports that a flock of swans was seen in the vicinity of Pierce's Point near the lower end of the lake one day. These birds are protected by the state laws at all seasons and any shooting, intentionally or purposely, makes the offender subject to a heavy fine.

Rabbit hunting is also good this year in the fields and the land thickly covered with underbrush and shrubs and the hunters are already bringing home bags of cotton tails and jacks. The prospects of one of the best hunting seasons in years are good for this winter.

REST CURE FOR FOOTBALL MEN

University Players Take Their Time About Their Training.

The "rest system" which prevailed in the Badger football camp between the Michigan and Minnesota games, will be employed in the preparation for the maroons at Marshall Field Thanksgiving day. The adverse outcome of the contest at Minneapolis is not laid to lack of work and it is feared that the players would be overtrained and state for the final game if hard work were to be administered during the coming week.

While some of the Wisconsin players are inclined to accuse the Gophers of rough playing, others say they always get a hard game at Minneapolis, and do not whine because the Gophers "humped" them hard in rolling up the same number of points as scored in the so-called gentleman's game of Michigan.

Vanderboon, Findlay, Hertie and other regulars of the Wisconsin team have not yet appeared for the resumption of practice. This is only partly due to bruises received at Minneapolis, but largely to the indisposition of the players. When Phil King coached the Badgers, the players reported when ordered to do so and laid off for rest when he gave permission. The graduate coach system at Madison, which is established as being a disastrous experiment, has had the effect of making the leading members of the team their own judges as to whether they need training or not.

FIX TIME LIMIT OF SEVEN HOURS

Rural Mail Carriers Must Make Circuit in One Hour Less Than Formerly.

An order has gone into effect limiting the time to seven hours in which the rural mail carriers can make their deliveries on circuits of twenty-five miles. Heretofore the time has been eight hours. Except when the roads are in bad condition it is thought that the seven hour limit is sufficient to enable them to complete the circuit provided they have good horses. If the animals now in use cannot make the time it will be necessary to purchase faster steeds. In case of bad roads, such as experienced in winter, the excuse will be sufficient to allow more time. The order will in no way effect the pay of the carriers.

WORK OVERTIME TO RUSH ORDERS

New Doty Manufacturing Company Have Three Large Machines They Are Hurrying Through.

Lights are burning each evening at the plant of the New Doty Manufacturing company on North Main street and a full force of men is at work three hours over time every day of the week and last Sunday a partial force worked. The factory is now over-taxed with a rush order for three large machines, two punches and shears combined and one large boiler sending roll for which the company for whom they are being made are now waiting. These machines are some of the largest manufactured in the United States and can be purchased at very few machine shops or factories.

Mrs. Austin's Pancake Flour, made from the three great stalks of life—wheat, corn and rice.

WHERE CLOTH, LACE AND FUR MAKE THE FASHION. The extreme of style is apparent in this exquisite gown of pale mauve tulle cloth, with trimmings of heavy real point Arabie and discreet touches of moleskin. The coat follows the house patterns, which is still in high vogue in Paris for the slender young girls, and over the shoulders there is a cape effect of the fur and lace very cleverly combined. The skirt is built in three shaped sections, the front breadth running in two loose box pleats from band to hem. The sides and back are shirred each to the straight edge of the other, the flounces taking an upward slant toward the back that gives a gracefully modish line, and the double row of lace that is posed upon the hem is inset with tiny motifs of the fur that enhances the beauty of both. A plain band of moleskin finishes the design, and the entire effect is one of simple girlishness and grace.

SACRIFICES TO BE "LADYLIKE"

WOMAN'S NOBLEST AMBITIONS SMOTHERED.

REV. PERKINS ON PROGRESS

Told Suffrage Convention Last Evening of Women's Advancement—Raps Euclyre Players.

If his ears didn't tingle last evening, the Janesville man, collectively speaking, is a calloused lot. One speaker at the Women's Suffrage convention urged her hearers to be hopeful—if the husband smoked she should feel comforted that he did not chew; if he both chewed and smoked, she should rejoice that he did not drink; if he did all three, she should be glad that he would not live long. Another was comforted to know that even if the men of the United States didn't half appreciate the women, they at least never harassed them with cows and dogs.

Ladies Club Reports. Several of the ladies' clubs were represented and there was a good attendance at the meeting. Mrs. E. O. Kimberley gave a very pleasing account of the work of the Janesville Art league, its courses of study, lectures by Prof. Theodore Lyman Wright, and the work the eighty-five members are doing to encourage a love for the beautiful.

Love for the beautiful. Mrs. Carrie Glenn spoke of the labors of the Women's Relief corps. The efforts along the line of educational patriotism were dwelt upon at considerable length. It was the idea of the organization to forever perpetuate, like the Spartan women of old, a lesson in loyalty and the memories of the heroes of the Grand Army. The encroachment of athletic games on the day devoted to the nation's honored dead, was noted with sorrow. Increasing immigration, bringing to our shores each year thousands of the foreign-born, made the work of inculcating patriotism and love of country a task of growing importance. The varied work of the corps was no child's play or six-handed euclyre game. The 150,000 women engaged in it were as capable of voting, surely, as the ignorant foreigner who can't tell a ballot from a porous plaster. Mrs. Poorman gave a very interesting account of the W. C. T. U. scientific education in the schools. Legislation secured through the efforts of their organization with its 200,000 earnest workers, was both teaching women to be more reliant and preparing the way for the ballot as a protection for women against men who drink and the liquor traffic. Men and children were being educated to expect universal suffrage in this country of ours.

Rev. Perkins of Cleveland

A most entertaining talk on "The Progress of Woman During the Last Century" was given by Rev. Mrs. S. M. C. Perkins of Cleveland, Ohio. One hundred years ago, so far as women's industrial and educational status was concerned, she had little. Her right to own property was not recognized and when the husband died he left his estate to his sons. Even within a few decades of the present time these unjust laws existed and Elisabeth Cady Stanton, while a child, found these wrongful property provisions in her father's law books and cut them out with a pair of scissors, in the childish belief that that ended them. Public opinion began to be educated, however. The first Women's Suffrage convention met in 1848. Every little country editor told his readers how two bonnets looked and even ministers joined in the wholesale ridicule. All this really advertised the cause, for it is universally admitted that one cannot even make butter without agitation.

Unjust Taxation. We must still pay taxes on property and have no voice in the disposal of the money, while the man who mows our lawns or digs our potatoes has a vote in such disposition. Great Progress Being Made.

While the multiplication of tables taught in the schools of the early day needed not to be learned by girls, hard work at home was never optional with them. The industrial advancement and new inventions had brought great blessings to all. The inferiority of women in certain portions of Europe had to be acknowledged. During the past ten years the speaker had visited Europe twice and she had seen women harnessed with dogs and dragging a burden on the streets of Antwerp. In Munich she had seen a woman hitched with a cow and a man with a whip urging the team along. The woman did not look as if she had a soul. In the east where the women are slaves of men, they say, themselves, that they have no souls. The women of America are progressing. Even here the men don't half appreciate them, but they never harness them with dogs and cows.

Spiritual Elevation. One hundred years ago colleges for boys had been in existence for 100 years. Even up to 1840 there was not one for women. Fifty years later we had 305 for men and women, of which there were 130 exclusively for women. In 1900 degrees were conferred on 10,000 men and 4,000 women. There are now 65,000 men and 34,000 women studying at our higher institutions of learning. These changes have come about through personal effort on the part of the women. Referring to the work of Mary Lyons the speaker said that some complained that her efforts were not ladylike; "Oh that word 'ladylike'—how many women have smothered their ideals and aspirations, their hopes of progress, to be 'ladylike'!" The spiritual elevation of women had been rapid. A hundred years ago they were brought up with the idea that a curse rested on them. That was not the idea of Christ. He was severe with the men, but his word spoken to women, but was not gentle was the one to Martha. St. Paul is sometimes quoted: "Let women keep silence in the churches." But it must be remembered that he also told men not to get married. This is not quoted. One hundred years ago the wife promised in the marriage ceremony to obey, while the husband only promised to cherish and protect. One hundred years ago, when the husband died the wife was called a "relic." You can see it now on the old grave stones. Women have since done great work in almost every field of endeavor. Ninety-nine out of every one of our schools are women. Soon their status will be equal to that of men. Victor Hugo said that the 19th century belonged to women. Now in the twentieth century we are going to take what is ours.

Great Campaign Funds

Rev. Olympia Brown in a few closing remarks said that $25,000,000 had been spent on the campaigns of the various candidates during the recent election and the country was no better off for it. Millions had been expended for Roosevelt's election when it was a foregone conclusion from the beginning, and millions had been spent for Parker when his defeat was also a certainty. Money advanced for the women's cause would not be expended in vain and she urged her hearers to make such contributions as within their power. The meeting closed with song.

Lawyers Were Gracious.

Rev. Brown says that injustice was done the Janesville bar in yesterday's report of the convention. Upon pressing her invitations to attend the suffrage meeting she found many who were unqualifiedly in favor of the ballot for women and not a few went into argument and gave as sound reasons for their views. Only one was strongly opposed to the idea of women's suffrage.

News for the Railroad Men.

North-Western Notes. Conductor J. McDonald and engineer Smith who are laying off the Barrington turn around were called for a stock run this morning.

Engine 737 is in the shop for repairs being relieved by engine number 579.

Train number 578 was composed of five sections last evening, making five extra stock trains that passed through the city.

A large number of crates of poultry are being shipped to Chicago. These shipments are all consigned to the commission merchants of that city, and will be sent from there to the different cities around Chicago for the Thanksgiving day trade.

Clayton Tanberg is off duty, being relieved by Bert Rutter and Rutter is being relieved by Robert Lee.

Engineer Carer of the night switch engine is off duty on account of sickness, being relieved by E. A. Schoenberg.

Fireman R. P. Kay is laying off. Fireman Townsend is relieving him.

Electrician Ed. Smith is in Chicago today securing new equipment for the company telephone line between the round house and tower "YD." Now the phones are so out of order that no messengers can be sent from one place to the other.

Elevation of railroad tracks to cost approximately $5,000,000 and the abolishment of forty-two grade crossings within the city limits of Chicago have been provided for in ordinances completed recently by Track Elevation Expert John O'Neil. These will be introduced next Monday and will in due time undoubtedly pass the council. One ordinance provides for the elevation of the tracks of the Northwestern Railroad company and those of the Oak Park and Chicago Elevated Railway company from Forty-sixth avenue to Austin avenue.

The latter company purposes raising its tracks on an embankment. A right probably will be developed over the plan to build a solid roadbed instead of a steel structure within the city limits.

The Grand Trunk Pacific Railway company has secured an option on the Pacific Northern & Ombeca railway, which runs from Kilmat to Hazelton, in British Columbia. The line is 130 miles in length and covers over a quarter of the distance between the coast and Rocky mountains.

Coming Attractions.

Thomas Q. Seabrooke has made a great hit in the character of John Doe, in Klav & Erlanger's marvelously beautiful spectacular production of Harry B. Smith and Gus Kerkor's new musical comedy, "The Billionaire," which will be presented in this city at the Myers Grand Thursday evening. This part is said to be better adapted to him than any in which he has yet been seen. The company numbers 100 people and a more talented and evenly balanced organization it is said, is not now to be seen on the American stage. Twenty-one musical numbers of very great merit are rendered during the performance. "The Billionaire," Thomas Q. Seabrooke, is the role of a man with so much money that he has a strenuous time getting rid of it. This piece is constructed on new lines, and derives its humor, in the main, from a very spirited pasquinade on the new type in American life, the money burner, and some very pointed shafts thrown at first-nighters in New York, the folks noticeable in audiences, and at the conceit of actors. It is presented in two acts which represent a street in Nice at the Carnival, and the lobby and auditorium of a New York theatre. The piece is said to be gorgeously mounted and will present a great array of extremely pretty girls. The principals of Mr. Seabrooke's support are: Diamond Donner, Josie Intrepid, Helen Dexter, Lois Ewell, Vesta Stanton, Helen Carpenter, Ethel Intrepid, Bessie Kinella, Pauline Harrier, Harry Macdonough, Tony Hart, Walter Percival, A. Seymour Brown, Frederic Scott, John Stepping, Charles Halton, James Grant and Abraham Friedland. The sale of seats opened this morning.

...Forty Years Ago...

Janesville Daily Gazette, Wednesday, November 16, 1864.—Accident on the Milwaukee and Prairie du Chien railway.—The freight train that left here this morning at 4 o'clock under the charge of Conductor Johnson met with quite a serious accident near Milton Junction. By some means the target at the switch was broken and eight cars were thrown from the track—four of which were pretty badly demolished. One of the cars was loaded with twelve horses all of which escaped serious injury except two. The engine was thrown from the track and the engineer, Chas. Smith, had his leg broken in jumping from the engine. The tender was damaged. No other person except Smith was injured by the accident. Superintendent W. B. Strong was promptly upon the ground clearing up the wreck which he hopes to have accomplished this afternoon.

Meeting of the Ladies Soldiers Aid Society.—Mrs. J. S. Colt, of Milwaukee, will be in the city on Friday next and will meet the ladies of the Soldiers Aid Society in their rooms on that afternoon at 2 o'clock. Consequently the weekly meeting will be at that time instead of Thursday—the regular time of meeting. It will be an interesting meeting and it is hoped that the rooms will be full.

SEEK LONGER LIFE FOR CEDAR POLES

Bureau of Forestry to Establish Stations in Wisconsin to Experiment on Methods of Seasoning.

The Bureau of Forestry has recently signed an agreement to make extensive timber seasoning tests in two western states, in co-operation with two telegraph companies. Experimental stations will be located at Marquette, Wis., and Escanaba, Mich., and probably a third station will be established at Ashland, Wis. The expense of the experiments will be borne jointly by the Bureau and the companies. Cedar and tamarack telephone and telegraph poles will be furnished by the state of Wisconsin free of cost, and two railroad companies have agreed to haul them to the experimental stations without charge for freight.

The object of the experiments is to determine how many years can be added to the life of each pole by proper seasoning. Since millions upon millions of poles are used along telegraph and telephone lines, even one year's extra service for each pole will amount to a tremendous saving in expense. Unseasoned cedar poles last from twelve to fifteen years. Seasoning experiments have shown how to increase this time by three or four years, and it is now expected to improve on this increase. Past methods of seasoning have effected a drying out of 20 per cent. of the original weight of the poles. The better seasoned pole, the less chance there is for decay, which is promoted by moisture.

Such experiments are of large importance not only to telegraph and telephone companies, but to all users of heavy timbers which come in contact with the ground, at which time decay goes on in its most deadly work. It is believed that still greater economies can be secured by the use of proper methods of preservative treatment. The latter is a subject which the Bureau of Forestry has for some time been investigating, as set forth in its bulletin No. 41, "Seasoning of Timber," and other publications. Further bulletins dealing with different aspects of the same problem will be issued later.

AMONG THE WORLD'S WORKERS

News Notes From Various Sources of Great Interest to the Workman.

Captain J. M. McGregor, of Detroit, Mich., has been notified by Secretary Frank Morrison, of the American Federation of Labor, that the charter of the International Pilots' Association has been revoked and its return is requested. The reasons are that there does not appear to be any organization in existence and no per capita tax has been paid on the membership claimed.

At a meeting of the Manchester (Eng.) city council recently it was announced that owing to the hard times and depression in the cotton industry, between forty and fifty thousand persons in the poorer parts of the city were practically on the verge of starvation. Similar conditions prevail in London and other large cities of the United Kingdom, where the winter is expected to be one of the hardest in many years for the poorer classes.

At Marseilles, France, the strike of dock workers, which practically ended some days ago, has now been officially closed by the decision of the dockers' union to resume work, though a few coal heavers are still standing out. It is estimated that the 40 days of idleness consequent upon this strike cost the city $10,000,000.

Recently published census figures show that every fifth child between the ages of ten and fifteen in the United States is a bread winner.

The eight-hour law of the state of Washington has been declared constitutional by the courts of that state.

As a result of a strike of plasterers in Frieberg, Germany, an agreement has been made which shall be valid until January 1, 1906, and, after the date, always for one more calendar year, until one or the other contracting party gives notice to discontinue it four weeks before the end of the year. In the last, while notices must be in written form to the committee of the other side.

CURED WHEN OTHERS FAILED
1056 Winnetka Avenue, Chicago, Ill., Oct. 25, 1902.
Wine of Cardui can always be relied upon to cure when everything else fails. It is a certain cure for female diseases in their worst form. I suffered for years with ulceration. Intense pains in the womb and ovaries and dreadful headaches afflicted me for my work. Finally I grew so ill that I had to keep to my bed. The pains were so intense at times as to cause spasms and a disagreeable discharge drained my life force. In my extremity after all else had failed, I tried Wine of Cardui. After using it for two weeks I began to improve so rapidly that I felt encouraged to keep up the treatment, which I did for eight weeks, but at the end of that time I was entirely cured. What a relief was mine and how new and beautiful life looked to me when my health was restored. Only those who have passed through such a siege of sickness as I have will understand how much I value Wine of Cardui. It is indeed a boon to sick women.
Frances Mitchell
Secretary, North Chicago Frauen Verein.
Every weak woman needs Wine of Cardui. Wine of Cardui cures disordered and painful menstruation, periodical headaches, falling of the womb and leucorrhoea. It cures extreme cases of these troubles. It strengthens girls approaching womanhood, helps bring children to barren homes, makes pregnancy and childbirth easier, prevents miscarriages and is the best medicine ever made for use during the change of life. Why permit the good women in your home to suffer another day? Every druggist has $1.00 bottles of Wine of Cardui.

Fair tonight and probably Thursday; fresh southerly winds.

There is at least one man in this city who is convinced that you are using too much space in this newspaper for your store advertising—that is your chief business competitor. If he is NOT so convinced you are making it too easy for him to get together, and probably both of you are losing business that is going to another town or is not created. Advertising not only wins more of the regular trade, for you through its educational properties but influences people to buy things that they might otherwise overlook.

SUGAR CONSUMPTION.

The sugar consumption of the United States in the current year seems likely to exceed that of any previous year, both in quantity and per capita. The total quantity of sugar brought into the United States in the nine months ending with September, 1904, is 4 1/4 billion pounds, against 3 3/4 billion pounds in 1903, the high record importation of sugar in the corresponding period in earlier years. Of this enormous quantity of sugar brought into the United States during the nine months practically one-fourth came from the noncontiguous territory of the United States—Hawaii, Porto Rico, and the Philippine Islands; more than one-half came from Cuba, and the remainder chiefly from other islands of the East and West Indies.

The reports issued by the Department of Commerce and Labor, through its Bureau of Statistics, covering the imports of the nine months ending with September, 1904, show that the total quantity of sugar brought into the United States from various parts of the world was 4,266,506,039 pounds, against 3,764,929,688 pounds in the corresponding period of 1903 and 3,791,492,579 pounds in the corresponding months of 1901, the high record years in earlier importations. Of this grand total of 4 1/4 billion pounds of sugar brought into the United States during the nine months of the present year, 687,911,928 pounds was from the Hawaiian Islands, 266,175,443 pounds from Porto Rico, and 24,201,588 pounds from the Philippine Islands. From Cuba the total for the nine-months period was 2,627,132,559 pounds, against 1,854,420,777 pounds in the corresponding months of 1903, and 1,538,011,822 pounds in the corresponding months of 1902. From the British West Indies the total was $9,394,216 pounds; from other West Indies and Bermuda, 107,068,642 pounds; from the East Indies other than the Philippine Islands, 259,774,777 pounds; and from South America, 62,080,056 pounds. All of the above is cane sugar. In addition to this there was 235,211,168 pounds of beet sugar, which came chiefly from Germany, and with it a small quantity from Belgium and a still smaller quantity from Austria-Hungary. This total for the nine months ending with September, 1904—4,266,506,709 pounds—exceeds by more than 500 million pounds the total for the corresponding period of any earlier year.

The value of the sugar brought into the United States during the nine months ending with September, 1904, is $101,116,717, of which $32,223,075 was from the island territories of the United States, $28,129,212 being from Hawaii, $9,083,863 from Porto Rico, and $34,242,440 from the Philippine Islands.

One especially interesting fact shown by a study of the figures of the imports of sugar is that the second largest importation (omitting from the consideration the sugar brought from the noncontiguous territories of the United States) was from the East Indies, chiefly Java, the largest being, as already indicated, Cuba. The total imports of sugar into the United States under the title of "East Indies" during the nine months ending with September, 1904, amounted to 259,774,777 pounds, valued at $4,319,463, and this is chiefly from Java. The imports of sugar into the United States from the Dutch East Indies have increased very greatly during recent years, the total in the fiscal year 1893 being 183,492,431 pounds, and in the fiscal year 1903, 891,768,690 pounds.

EVEN ARKANSAS.

The report from Arkansas that there is a possibility that Roosevelt has carried over this southern stronghold of democracy. Chairman H. L. Kimmel of the republican state central committee has issued the following statement on the situation. If what he says is true then is the doom of democracy sealed even in its hitherto strongholds. Arkansas is a rock ribbed democratic stronghold of anti bellum days:

"There is great consternation among the democratic politicians here at the capitol. The ticket was short and there was very little trouble to vote. Six days have elapsed since the election, and returns received at the governor's office are from but twenty-seven of the seventy-five giving the results. Great secrecy is manifested on the part of those who ought to be informed as to the result, all of which is very significant, and from reports we are receiving it looks very much as though the Roosevelt and Fairbanks electors have carried the state.

"The Gazette is only claiming a majority of 20,000, and democratic politicians are claiming majorities ranging from 10,000 to 15,000. Returns from only one of the counties of the 'black belt' have been received. If a normal vote has been cast in these counties and should be returned as cast, it is a fair supposition that the republicans have carried the state by a small majority."

The democrats say the state is safe for them.

THE FUTURE.

Janesville is today entertaining as the guests of the Business Men's Association several gentlemen interested in the establishing of a large factory in the city. These men represent a half million dollars worth of capital. Not only this concern but hundreds of others are seeking for places to locate. Janesville is graphically located that it can command consideration when factory sites are to be considered. Easy access to the trade centers and good valuable land on which to locate the factories. Janesville has a bright future before it. All it needs is a little push and vim to make it a go.

The university has begun on the right path by getting rid of their present graduate manager. One good move towards a championship team in 1905. But only one. Do away with graduate coaches and that will be two. Get a new trainer, that will be three, and that will be a great step towards bringing athletics up to the standard.

The Women Suffragists are indignant to think the political parties of Wisconsin rejected their kind offer of aid if they would put a universal suffragist plank in their platform. This is another ism.

The Boston boy who came west to get a liberal education nearly got ducked in the lake as an example of what liberal education consists of in the west.

The trouble is we have too many ordinances passed that never are enforced and then people wonder why.

There are some things that can not be explained even by politicians—why Parker failed to carry New York.

Despite the goose bone the weather still remains where people can enjoy it and still live.

One thing Judge Parker would like to know—why did Tammany work against him?

Coach Stagg took to his bed after "Hurry Up" Yost got through with his proteges.

Those Third ward aldermen have no easy task before them in that alley question.

This ocean storm has done more damage on the coast than was first supposed.

November pansies are sturdy flowers when they can bloom in Wisconsin.

That dog license ordinance should not be repealed, it should be enforced.

New York stock markets have taken a boom as a result of the election.

When that boom strikes Janesville lots of men will say, I told you so.

Has anyone in Illinois yet discovered who Mr. Stringer was?

The beet sugar industry in Wisconsin has just begun.

PRESS COMMENT.

Oshkosh Times: If the silent vote winked at Tom Watson as he passed through the country it is clear now it was only done in sport.

Oshkosh Northwestern: Probably the reason that they often refer to a bride as "looking sweet enough to eat," is on account of the dressing which goes with the bird.

Racine Journal: Whenever the day dawns public sentiment is strong enough to authorize soldiers to refuse to go on the firing line, that day war will cease everywhere.

Stoughton Hub: The rumor that Gov. Bob will soon turn lose his army of game wardens with instructions to rip up all the railroad tracks in the state is denied at the capitol.

St. Paul Globe: The direct influence of Mr. Carnegie's voice in the election cannot be correctly estimated until we have the official figure from the Skibo district.

Toledo Blade: The democratic party can console itself in the fact that it has accomplished one good thing as the result of this campaign. Esopus, N. Y., has secured a good passenger station.

Atchison Globe: An Atchison woman whose husband beats her recalls that she got him by walking downstairs backward with a mirror in her hand one Halloween. She thought then that the fairies had led him there to peep over her shoulder; but has concluded since that he had broke into the cellar to steal something.

St. Paul Pioneer Press: Theodore Roosevelt comes nearest to being the unanimous choice of the people than any president elected since the second choosing of James Monroe, in 1820, when Monroe had no opposition and the only electoral vote cast for any one else was cast by a Monroe elector who voted for John Quincy Adams under the influence of a whimsical idea that it was wrong for one candidate to get all the votes.

SECOND PROGRAM ON COURSE GIVEN

Excellent Home Talent Concert Rendered at Methodist Church Last Evening.

One of the best and most enthusiastically received home talent concerts was rendered last evening at the Court street Methodist church. The program was the second in a course arranged by and produced under the auspices of the Loyal Daughters' circle of the church. The purpose of the course is to help raise money for the building of the new church edifice. The numbers were musical—vocal and instrumental—and declamatory. The opening and closing pieces were furnished by Paula Gertrude, Alta and Marion Paul, Lillian Crowley, and Mr. Jerome Davis. Vocal solos were furnished by Mrs. A. E. Damer, Athol Rollins and Laverne W. Brooks. Mr. Rollins sang "Forest Song," by Krieger; Mrs. Damer, "Greeting Days" and Mr. Brooks, "Matinata." Each was forced to respond to the encore that followed the rendition of their numbers. The ladies' trio composed of Mesdames Yates, Damer, Fleck, Richards, Taylor and Davison, and the Misses Pearl Hall, Mabel Williams and Luella Lake, rendered two regular numbers on the program, "Rose Waltz" by Peusche and "Night Sinks on the Way" by Smart, and each time responded to the applause. Piano solos were given by Miss Della Cheney and Julia from the—appliance the audience appreciated each solo. Declamations were rendered most creditably by Miss Fair Bates and Miss Harriet Decker. Miss Decker chose "Jovita" and Miss Bates "Beauty and the Beast."

MONUMENT FOR A SOUTHERN PRISON

Commission for the Andersonville Prison Monument Are to Visit the Site.

The Andersonville monument commission left for the south Tuesday to begin work for which it was created. Two years ago the legislature appropriated $10,000 for a suitable monument to be erected on this historic spot, made memorable by the Andersonville prison, where so many union soldiers met death. The commission as constituted is composed of Past Department Commander D. J. James, of Richland Center, who is president; C. H. Russell, of Berlin, state pension agent and also past department commander, is secretary and Lansing Williams, of Columbus, treasurer.

The commission will go to Andersonville by way of St. Louis, a brief stop being made at that fair. Bates' route from St. Louis is by way of Nashville, thence to Chattanooga. A day will be spent at Atlanta before reaching Andersonville. At each city visited the style of existing monuments in the cemeteries will be noted and compared, so that when the commission reaches Andersonville the members will be able to arrive at some conclusion in the matter. The gentlemen will regard their visit to the scene of the great prison with much interest, as they all have enjoyed within the stockade. Mr. Russell being a prisoner for nine months and two days. President James was a member of the 16th Wisconsin and also served time in the stockade. The commission will be absent three weeks and on its return will be ready for designs, and later proposals for construction. After the monument is completed Governor La Follette and staff will be present at the dedication and be entertained while enroute by the authorities of the cities which the commission will visit on the trip to Andersonville.

FAIR STAM PIS TO BE DROPPED

No Exposition Stickers After December First, Will Be Sold.

After December 1 the Louisiana Purchase commemorative stamps which have received a wide sale during the past months of the St. Louis exposition, will become property for the stamp collector. No more of them will be sold after the above date and they will pass into history as did the world's Columbian and the Buffalo exposition postage. The postmasters throughout the United States have been warned not to have a surplus on hand when the last day of sale comes and the customer at the stamp window need not feel surprised at this time if the clerk within hands him out a bunch of the Louisiana purchase stamps in place of the more familiar ones.

The above is in accordance with an order which has been sent out to the postmasters. Postmasters are told to be careful in this order that they do not make requisition for more of these stamps than can be sold by December 1. Beginning with last October 1 the postmasters were told that they would have to state in connection with requisitions for commemorative stamps that the amount ordered could be sold before the date of closing.

This fact may cause more of the exposition stamps to be seen during the remainder of this month than at any previous time during this year. The order concludes by saying: "Those postmasters whose present supply of commemorative stamps will probably last longer than December 1 at the usual rate of sale, are directed to immediately place them on sale instead of the regular issue, selling the latter only when specially desired by purchasers. This must not, however, be construed as instructions to force the sale of the commemorative stamps to purchasers."

The Little Fighters.

Callahan Is Ambitious—Once Beat McGovern—Frankie Neil—Bowker Coming.

Tim Callahan, the clever young featherweight pugilist, is working like a Trojan to reach the top of his class. Tim has a hard, vicious punch and is speedy on his feet. His recent victory over Sammy Smith of Philadelphia has encouraged him greatly.

Callahan is after both Eddie Hanlon and "Bittling" Nelson, but these two men do not consider him able to give them a good fight. "Well, wait until

TIM CALLAHAN, PROMISING FEATHERWEIGHT.

I get the chance," says Tim. "Then perhaps they won't be so sure of themselves."

Callahan is willing to post forfeit money for a fight with Terry McGovern, but the latter wants to meet either Young Corbett or Jimmy Britt.

Callahan defeated McGovern several years ago in New York when both men were in the banian class.

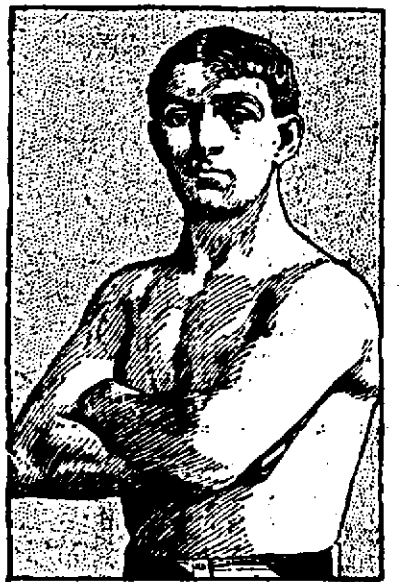

Frankie Neil is now back in America to make a good match with some promising bantam, if possible. His defeat at the hands of Jem Bowker was a great surprise to Neil and his backers. Neil went "broke" as a result and will have to work hard to recoup his losses.

England finally has a champion of her own, even though the honor was gained on a hair line decision. The victory of Jem Bowker over Frankie Neil gives the tight little island something to gloat over, although we would advise the Brits to nurse the champion well, as his glory will be of short duration should the new champion go far away from home.

Bowker gained the decision over the California boy in twenty rounds of fast and furious milling. It is a certainty that it was a pretty speedy affair, for if it hadn't been Bowker would not have gone the twenty rounds. Neil is not in the habit of letting his opponent take any naps during a bout, and for that reason Bowker must be a pretty tough boxer to have been able to stand the gaff that long.

From accounts we learn that Neil started in a whirlwind fashion and kept up the gait until the tenth round, when the effort began to tell. It was at this point that Bowker got his second wind and began to hammer the American amidst in a way which at the end of the bout gave him the decision, according to the referee, who of course was the home bred kind.

The fact that Neil lost after practically having the Englishman at his mercy in the ninth round tells a whole lot. It showed conclusively that the climate began to get in its work on the American and that he did not have the staying power he exhibited in this country. He apparently went to pieces all in a hurry, as he was inflicting all sorts of punishment on his opponent in the middle of the fight.

DIES IN APARTMENT ALONE WITH WEALTH

Cousin of the Vanderbilts Breathes Her Last in Gorgeous but Solitary Brooklyn Flat.

Brooklyn, N. Y., Nov. 16.—Elizabeth Kissam, a cousin of W. K. Vanderbilt, died of apoplexy in her apartment on Greene avenue and lay undiscovered for four days. She had been living for four years alone in the flat.

On Thursday night Mrs. Kissam was in apparently good health and spirits. Since then she had not been seen. An unnatural quiet pervaded the apartment, the door of which was locked. Mrs. Kissam's son finally investigated and found his mother lying across the bed, half-dressed, with blood clotted about her mouth.

William K. Vanderbilt, Jr., has a grandmother Kissam on his father's side, and his own middle name is Kissam. The family is well known in Manhasset, Long Island, where the Vanderbilts have property.

WANTS UNCLE SAM AS GUARDIAN

Peru Is Urged to Cultivate Amity for Sake of Arbitrating Issues.

Lima, Nov. 16.—Ex-Minister of Foreign Affairs Elmoro, in a recent report sent to congress, says Peru by every means ought to seek the friendship of the United States in order to count on their assistance in a solution of pending international questions. He refers also to the vast concessions of territory to American syndicates and the enormous amounts of American money constantly being invested in railroads, mines and other enterprises in Peru. Therefore Peru, being weak, expects the protective influence of the United States.

WOMAN IS DOOMED TO GALLOWS

Failure of Bill to Abolish Capital Punishment Seals Her Fate.

Montpelier, Vt., Nov. 16.—A bill to abolish capital punishment in Vermont, upon which hung the life of Mary M. ## CHAPTER XI.—(Continued.)

"It would take me a week, John, to tell my experiences of the last five years," said Jim Blake, tossing another log into the fire. "Most of them would not interest you, some might amuse you, and others would make you mad. I've been rich three times, John, and in love twice—no, three times."

"How rich, and how badly in love?" "My strokes of fortune and my love affairs are all jumbled together," explained Blake, laughing heartily. "You'll have a bad opinion of me, John, but I've reformed and am going to lead a better life. I made my first strike on the Little Calaveras. Talk about luck! That was a funny thing. I broke my neck, and discovered a gold mine and a sweetheart in doing it!"

"Broke your neck? Surely you're jesting!"

"It's a fact, just the same," asserted Blake, thoughtfully rubbing the back of his neck, which showed no signs of fracture. "I was a greenhorn then, and my prospecting expeditions were the joke of the old stagers. I bought a horse and a Mexican saddle and prowled through all the mountains and foothills back of the Little Calaveras. One afternoon I was following a trail that skirted along the side of a mountain. There's a lot of woodchucks in those hills, and in burrowing around one of them loosened a rock, which came rolling down in my direction. My horse saw and heard it, and shied off the trail. He slid about twenty feet and then fell, and as he went my right foot went through the stirrup. He rolled over me, and we started down the slope. Sometimes I was on top, and sometimes he was on top."

"Four or five hundred feet below I saw a thin row of trees, and I knew they marked the edge of a cliff. For some reason there's most always a fringe of trees at these jumping-off places. We were going like lightning. Just as we neared the edge the horse rolled over me again. As I came on top I saw that we were going to pass between two small trees. A big rock slewed the horse around, and he went down head first. I grabbed at a tree, and by the merest chance threw my free leg around it. I held like grim death to a cobb, and heard the leather snap as the horse went over the precipice. If it had been a first-class saddle I wouldn't be here to tell the tale. I was hanging down over the cliff. It was eighteen hundred feet deep to the first stopping place, and I saw that horse, all sprawled out, turn over and over in the air. I closed my eyes so as not to see him strike. Then I crawled back a few feet and sat down behind a rock. That's the last thing I remember until I woke up in bed. An old doctor, whose breath smelled of liquor, was bending over me, and near him was one of the prettiest girls I ever saw. She and her father were approaching me when I started to slide down the mountain. Her name was Jenny Rogers."

Jim sighed and paused. "This is growing romantic, but how about the broken neck?" asked John. "It was broken, or dislocated, which is about the same thing," continued Blake. "Jenny's father knew of an old Spanish doctor, about forty miles away, and went for him. He was a wonder on bones. He was black as an Indian and uglier than sin. He felt around my neck, swore softly in Spanish, rolled me over on my face, climbed on my back, jabbed his knees into my shoulder blades, and grabbed me by the jaws. He gave my head a quick wrench. I saw a thousand sky-rockets; something cracked and I became senseless. When I awoke he had my neck in splints, and was jabbering Spanish to Rogers. He said he was the only white man in the world who could set a broken neck, and I guess he was. He had learned the trick from an Indian medicine man. He charged me twenty-five dollars, and told me to lie quiet for a week. Jenny Rogers nursed me, and of course I fell in love with her. I was in their cabin, and near by Mr. Rogers had located some valuable claims."

"Here is the most remarkable part of this story," Blake went on. "When I was able to dress I picked up that cursed Mexican stirrup to see how the leather happened to break. It was a steel affair, and I noticed some bright yellow spots in the crevices. Blamed if it wasn't gold! I didn't say a word, but when I was strong enough I went back and climbed slowly down the place where my horse fell. It was easy to follow it. Near the edge of the cliff I found an outcropping of gold-bearing ore, and the mark of where the metal part of my stirrup had scratched it. I stalked out a claim and sold it to Jenny's father for a hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars. He made two millions out of it. I made love to Jenny, and I think she would have had me, but I went to San Francisco and dropped the hundred and twenty-five thousand on the mining exchange. I went back and asked Jenny to wait until I made another fortune. She said she'd think about it. I guess she did. A year later she married a man who is now a United States Senator. So I broke my neck, lost my fortune and my sweetheart all in less than a year."

"And what have you now?" "This mountain chateau," replied Blake, with a lordly sweep of his arm, and a hole in the ground back of it. "Then I have a fine view of the valley, a good appetite, a slumbering conscience, and—dog here, here, here, never upbraid me for being seven kinds of a fool."

John told the story of the dying sailor and his map, and read an extract from Peter Burt's letter. Then he produced the map, and they spread it out on the table and examined it by the light of the lantern. "I followed the trail all right," explained John, "until the storm set in, and then I had to feel my way. Before I lost my bearings I was about two miles from the point where this sailor claims to have found gold. I kept near the edge of the cliff until I could go no further, and then curled up behind that rock in the hope that the storm would cease."

Blake studied the map with growing interest and excitement. With a splinter from a log as a marker he traced the trail.

"I know every foot of it!" he exclaimed, resting the point of the splinter on a round spot on the map. "Here is Fisher's Lake. You came that far by stage. Here is the creek which you follow for seven miles until you come to the old Wormley trail. You take that to the cliffs, and go along the cliffs until you cross four brooks and come to the fifth one. You were within a hundred yards of that fifth stream, John. Now let's see the key to this thing."

John handed him the letter.

"From the east face of the square rock, on the north bank of the brook, at the edge of the cliff," read Blake. "I know the rock well. Let's see. Thence east along the bank of the brook in a straight line four hundred and twenty-two feet, and then north at right angles, sixty-seven feet to the base of the tallest pine in the neighborhood."

Blake rushed to the door, forgetful of the storm, to verify his suspicions. He pushed it open an inch, but a solid bank of snow blocked the way. "Where do you suppose the base of that pine tree is?" he demanded. Without waiting for a reply he found a hatchet and tapped the clay floor until he located a spot which gave a deadened sound. Then he chopped away a few inches of packed dirt and sank the blade into a solid substance. "There's the base of the big pine tree, described by your dead sailor, and I'll bet my life on it," he shouted. And here, are sections of the tree, he continued, pointing to the logs which formed the foundation of the cabin. "I'm dead sure of it, John. It's about a hundred and forty yards from here to the edge of the cliff. I know, for I measured it. And its about twenty yards to the brook. What is more conclusive, this was by far the largest tree anywhere around. That's why I located the cabin here. Let's see what comes next!" His eyes glistened with excitement.

The instructions were to measure three hundred and eighteen feet north from the base of the tree and thence east to a carefully described rock, which Blake remembered. This was the base of the incline. Within a hundred yards of this rock the key located three gold-bearing quartz ledges.

"I've been past it a hundred times. I've struck a pick all around there and never found ore," said Blake reflectively, "but that proves nothing. A thousand people walked over the Little Calaveras before I found the gilt. Well, John," he concluded, relapsing to the familiar Yankee drawl, "don't this beat time, as Uncle Toby Haynes used to say?"

"It certainly is remarkable," said John Burt, folding the map. "How did you happen to select this particular spot, Jim?"

"Just happened to, that's all," was the laconic reply. "I laid out claims all along here, but this one seemed the most likely."

"I suppose your claims cover the ground indicated on this map, don't they?" asked John.

"It don't make a bit of difference whether they do or not," asserted Blake with much vigor. "If you find ore, the claim is yours, John, and don't you forget it!"

"Suppose we go partners in the Sailor mine," suggested John. "I have a tidy sum of money, and I'll offset that and the map against your claim and experience. What do you say, Jim?"

"It's not fair to you, John, but I'll gladly accept, and here's my hand on it!"

After breakfast they set about locating the sailor's vein. In less than an hour Jim Blake sunk his pick into a quartz rock which showed free gold. While Jim was gloating over his find, John appeared from behind a ledge. He handed Blake a nugget which weighed fully ten pounds, and a glance—to say nothing of the weight—showed it to be almost solid gold. Blake grasped it, devoured its dull gloss with sparkling eyes, and hurried his hat high in the air.

"We are rich! We are rich!" he shouted until the rocks resounded. "Monte Cristo was a beggar compared with Burton & Blake! Hurrah for the Sailor mine and John Burt! You can't keep a good man down! Hurrah!"

CHAPTER XIII.

The Quest for Gold.

The two young giants performed wonders in the three weeks which followed their discovery of gold. Glowing with health and strength, and inspired by ambition, they gnawed ragged holes into the side of the mountains with their picks and drills. Several nuggets were found, but these were of small value compared with the broad stratum of ore which opened out from the spot selected by John Burt. The claim chosen by Blake soon exhausted itself, and he turned his attention to the third, expressing a fear that he was a "hoodoo."

"But there's luck in odd numbers," said Rory O'More, "sang Blake as he poised on a shivering ledge and vigorously drove a crowbar into a crevice. Ere the sun dropped below the range he had uncovered another wide, deep vein of gold-bearing quartz.

The spring rains set in and the brook became a foaming, thundering torrent. Avalanches tore down the mountain sides, plowed their way over the cliff, and with a roar which shook the cabin, hurled themselves into the valley. The pine trees lost their plumes of snow, and sang in a higher key the refrain which told of relief from burdens carried complainingly for months.

Filled in gray heaps near the tunnel was ore worth not less than forty thousand dollars. With the flight of the snow and the birth of spring, Blake wearied of his task and longed for its rewards.

"Tell you what let's do, John," he said one night after supper. "Let's go to Auburn and negotiate the sale of these mines. We ought to get big money for the Sailor, John."

"How much?" asked John, after a moment's pause. "Half a million," replied Blake positively, with a loving accent on the "million." "Half a million is dead cheap. Don't you think so, John?"

"I shall not sell my interest—at least, not at present," said John Burt, "and I advise you not to. We can handle this property without trouble, and make more in developing it than by selling it. Besides, I doubt if we can get an offer of half a million."

"We can try, John," said Blake hopefully. "Two hundred and fifty thousand dollars is a lot of money. I would take it in a minute if I could get it."

They discussed the matter for hours, but Blake would not recede from his position. Dangling before his eyes was a purse containing two hundred and fifty thousand dollars, to be obtained without further work or worry. It meant pleasure, affluence, ease, liberty—it was enough. Not so with John Burt. When the rock crumbled beneath the first blow of his pick and the ten pound nugget gleamed in the shale, he recalled the parting words of Peter Burt quoting the language of Isaiah: "I will give thee the treasures of darkness and the hidden riches of secret places."

"We'll talk no more about this matter tonight, Jim," he said, when Blake had finished telling of the great things which could be accomplished with a quarter of a million dollars. "I'll think it over for two or three days, and then we'll take the question up and decide it."

Blake curbed his impatience and worked and waited. He knew John Burt well enough not to mention the topic during the days which followed. One evening, after supper, John spent an hour or more figuring in an old note-book.

"I suppose you are still determined to sell your share in these mines, Jim?" said John. "I am, if I can get an offer of a quarter of a million," replied Jim.

"You're making a mistake, old man," said John Burt, laying his hand on his friend's shoulder, "but you have as much right to your opinion as I have to mine. So we will call that settled. I told you I would make you a proposition, and here it is. There are two mines, and they look equally promising. I propose that you take one and I take the other. We will call the south one 'Sailor A' and the north 'Sailor B.' You can have your choice."

"That's not fair!" said Jim. "I'll play you a game of seven-up for the first choice; three games of ten points each—best two out of three to take first choice."

"All right," responded John, as Blake produced a well worn pack of cards and shuffled them. "But before we play, let me finish my proposition. You wish to sell your claims for two hundred and fifty thousand if you can find a purchaser. Will you give me an option on your claim. I'll give you five thousand in cash for the following reason on your claim—you, to deed me all your rights in consideration of one hundred thousand dollars, payable in sixty days from this date; one hundred thousand payable in six months from date, and one hundred thousand payable in one year from date. And—

"You bet your life I will," interrupted Blake, extending his hand. Make it two thousand in cash, John. That will be enough. Make it two thousand and I'll go you."

"We will call it twenty-five hundred, and you can have the other twenty-five hundred if you need it," said John smiling. "But I had not finished. You shall have one-half of the proceeds from the sale of the ore already mined. That should net you $25,000. You need not shake your head. In any arrangement I may make with outsiders you shall have ten per cent of all profits payable to me. I wish to feel that you will always have an interest in the Sailor mine."

"All right, John," said Jim, finally. Now we'll play that game of seven-up."

Blake won the first game and John the second. In the third game John had two to go, and Blake lacked six points. It was his deal. He turned two jacks before the trump was selected, and then made high, low, jack, and the game, and won the rubber and the first choice.

"Lucky in cards, unlucky in love," laughed Blake as he arose from the table. "Sailor A is mine—subject to your option, John."

John drew up an agreement and an option, which both signed, and the firm of Burton & Blake was dissolved. Blake accepted twenty-five hundred dollars in cash, and three days later both arrived in the little mining town of Auburn, from which they sent a trustworthy man back to the cabin, to remain on guard until John Burt returned.

Bidding, Blake adieu for a week or more, Burt proceeded to San Francisco.

He engaged rooms in the Palace hotel—registering under the name of John Burton—and made inquiries concerning the leading mining experts of the city. He decided to present his case to David Parker. He wrote the famous expert a brief letter, and was duly accorded an interview.

During the brief preliminary conversation, John Burt studied David Parker and decided to trust him. Then he related the story of the discovery of the Sailor mine.

"I have always believed that those hills—that those hills—contained gold," said David Parker hesitatingly. "Why do you come to me, Mr. Burton?" he asked. "I am not an investor. I'm an expert—at least, an alleged expert."

"I wish you to refer me to an investor," replied John Burt. You are an expert in metals and should be in capitalists. You know them, I don't."

"Go and see John Hawkins," said David Parker, as a faint smile froze on his face. He is honest—but hard—hard as granite. I hope you may succeed with him—Mr. Burton. If you and—Mr. Hawkins cannot come to terms, I—might refer you to others. Good day; good day, sir—and good luck!"

As David Parker predicted, John Burt had little trouble in securing an interview with John Hawkins, millionaire mine owner and investor. He wrote the name "John Burton" on a card and gave it to an attendant. Two burly men stood in the doorway, pausing to make some parting remark, which was followed by roars of merriment. The attendant brushed past them as they closed the door.

"Tell him to come in," was the order given in a voice sonorous through the heavy partition.

John Burt's education in the etiquette of servility and in adulation of material things was singularly defective. This may have been due to his country training. It never occurred to John Burt that he should stand in awe of the Hawkins millions. He was impressed by the leonine head and gigantic proportions of the magnate, as an artist is when he contemplates for the first time some stupendous work of nature. He returned the great man's gaze; before which most strangers quailed and faltered, with an answering look which calmly asserted an equality, yielding deference only to a seniority of years.

"How do you do? What can I do for you, sir? Take a chair." Mr. Hawkins glanced again at the card, tossed it on his desk, and wheeled and confronted John Burt, who had accepted this gruff invitation.

"Own or control some recently discovered gold mines, and am in San Francisco for the purpose of interesting capital in their development," said John Burt. "I am informed that you are an investor in mining property. I am in a position to submit propositions which may result to our mutual advantage."

"Where are they?" growled Mr. John Hawkins. For an answer John stepped behind the capitalist and placed his fingers on a point indicated on a large map of California which hung on the wall.

"They are located on the west slope of the Sierra Nevada, at an altitude of about two thousand feet above the river, five miles south of the Wormley trail," said John. "Here is a rough detailed map of the surroundings."

He handed the chart to Mr. Hawkins. "There is no gold there—not an ounce," declared the magnate. "You have found a mare's nest, young man. I looked that country over ten years ago. There's no gold there."

"My partner and I have extracted forty thousand dollars' worth of high grade ore there in three weeks," said John Burt quietly. "Here is a specimen of it. Here is something else."

He placed a sample of ore and the ten-pound nugget in Hawkins' outstretched hand.

At the sight of the ore, and of the dull gloss of the nugget, a wonderful transformation took place in John Hawkins. He gazed at the ore with the rapt look of an enthusiast. The weight of the nugget told its own story.

"Go ahead and tell me about this," he said abruptly. "You look like an honest man, and it's a waste of time to lie to me. What have you got, and how did you get it?"

In a matter of fact way John Burt related the story of the discovery and development of the Sailor Mine.

"This may be worth looking into," said the capitalist. "I'll send an expert to investigate it and make a report." He rang a bell and a boy responded. "Go and tell David Parker I want him," he ordered.

"Until we have arrived at some tentative agreement or understanding, I don't care to have your expert examine this property," said John Burt, when the boy had closed the door. "Your expert will find one of two things—either that my estimate of these claims is accurate, or that it is not. In the latter event you would drop the matter. If, on the contrary, your expert confirms my estimate—as he will—it then becomes necessary to get under a definite understanding. In brief, the question is this. What agreement will you make, assuming that your expert confirms my statements?"

"That sounds like business," roared John Hawkins, a gleam of admiration for an opponent worthy of his attention showing in his eyes. "Make your proposition. You're selling; I'm buying. What's your terms?"

"You will assume the payments on the Blake option, which amount to three hundred thousand dollars," said John. "In addition to that, you will advance the money necessary for the development of the property and for the handling of the ore. Fifty per cent of the net profits will revert to you until the money paid to Blake is refunded. In consideration of the capital thus advanced, your interest in the property will amount to forty per cent and mine to sixty per cent."

"I won't do it!" thundered John Hawkins, slamming down the cover of his desk. "I must have control when I invest. Make my interest fifty-one per cent and I will talk to you. Fifty-one per cent or nothing."

"Very well," said John Burt, rising. "It is impossible for us to agree, and well we should know it in advance. Good-day, Mr. Hawkins. I am stopping at the Palace Hotel, and letters sent there will be forwarded when I leave the city. Good-day, sir."

Two days later John Burt received a message from David Parker, asking him to call at his office. Scientific tests had shown a much higher percentage of gold than those indicated by the crude experiments made in the cabin by John Burt.

"I had an interview with Mr. Hawkins this morning," said David Parker, after greeting his visitor. "Mr. Hawkins is a very peculiar man—very peculiar—as I have told you. He says you are the hardest man to deal with he ever saw—a great compliment for you, Mr. Burton. I assure you. He has had his lawyer draw up a provisional agreement in conformity to your terms—as he understood them—and instructs me to say to you that we are invited to dine with him at his club this afternoon, when the matter may be finally arranged. If so, I am to accompany you to the mines to-morrow."

John thanked Parker, and arranged to meet him with Mr. Hawkins at a later hour. He then called on an attorney and submitted the agreement to his inspection. After making a few minor alterations, the lawyer assured John that the agreement fully protected his interests.

Over a dinner such as is possible only in San Francisco the agreement was ratified.

PUTTING IT STRONG.

But doesn't it look reasonable? This may read as though we were putting it a little strong, because it is generally thought by the majority of people that Dyspepsia in its chronic form is incurable or practically so. But we have long since shown that Dyspepsia is curable, nor is it such a difficult matter as at first appears.

The trouble with Dyspepsia is that they are continually dieting, starving themselves, or going to opposite extremes or else deluging the already overburdened stomach with "bitters" after dinner pills, etc., which invariably increase the difficulty even if in some cases they do give a slight temporary relief. Such treatment, of course, makes the stomach worse. What the stomach wants is a rest. Now he can the stomach become rested, recuperated, and at the same time the body nourished and sustained.

This is a great secret and this is also the secret of the uniform success of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. This is a comparatively new remedy but its success, and popularity, leaves no doubt as to its merit.

The Tablet will digest the food anyway, regardless of condition of stomach.

The sufferer from Dyspepsia according to directions, is to eat an abundance of good wholesome food and use the tablets before and after each meal and the result will be that each meal will be digested, no matter how bad your Dyspepsia may be, because, as before stated, the tablets will digest the food even if the stomach is wholly inactive. To illustrate our meaning, plainly, if you take 1,800 grains of meat, eggs or ordinary food and place it in a temperature of 98 degrees, and put with it one of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets it will digest the meat or eggs almost as perfectly as if the meat was enclosed within the stomach.

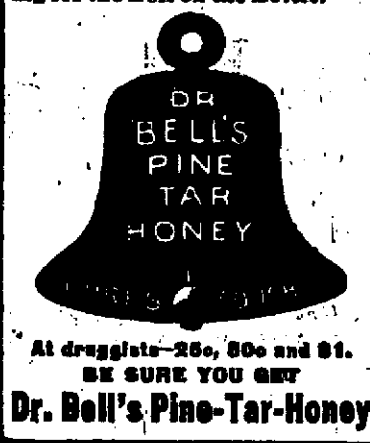

The stomach may be ever so weak yet these tablets will permit the food to be digested, and the body and brain will be properly nourished and at the same time a radical, lasting cure of Dyspepsia will be made because the much abused stomach will be given, to some extent, a much needed rest. Your druggist will tell you that of all the many remedies advertised to cure Dyspepsia none of them have given so complete and general satisfaction as Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, and not least in importance in these hard times is the fact that they are also the cheapest and give the most good for the least money.

SERIOUS CONDITIONS PREVAIL IN COLORADO

Tangle Over the Governorship May Lead to Civil Strife in the Centennial State.

Denver, Colo., Nov. 16.—The tangle over the governorship has become so serious that business interests and the friends of peace are beginning to take alarm.

Gov. Peabody contends that a fair canvass of the vote will give him a majority.

Alva Adams asserts that he has been fairly elected and that he will not yield. He declines, however, to outline his plans in the event that Gov. Peabody decides to attempt to hold the office.

Democratic leaders say that Adams must be seated, and that if this creates civil war it will be a righteous war. Gov. Peabody's adherents assert that with fraud eliminated Peabody is elected, and that they do not intend to be cheated out of the office. With the militia at their back and call everyone admits they are in a position to enforce their demands.

Public opinion is aroused more than it has been at any time since the killing of thirteen men at the Independence depot explosion. While commercial interests are counseling forbearance and are deprecating publicity, they admit the situation is critical. All the mining camps in the state are filling up with members of the Western Federation of Miners, and every one of them, it is declared, will take up arms if Adams should ask them to.

Gov. Peabody, on the other hand, has Sherman Hill and an excellently organized militia.

Carried Dynamite in Pocket. Louisville, Ky., Nov. 16.—Judson Smith, a farmer of Cumberland county, lost his life by an explosion of a stick of dynamite in his pocket.

FATHER SAVES CORPSE OF DAUGHTER FROM LAKE

Cling to Slippery Rocks All Night to Prevent Body Being Carried Away by the Waves.

Cleveland, O., Nov. 16.—John Vancise, living on the lake shore ten miles west of Cleveland, clung to the slippery rocks at the foot of an eighty-foot cliff all night with the dead body of his daughter in his arms to prevent the waves washing the corpse out into Lake Erie.

While attempting to extinguish a fire which was burning the grass around their home Miss Vancise fell over the eighty-foot cliff to the rocks beneath. Her shriek attracted the attention of her father, who was fighting the fire near by, and he jumped over the bluff after her.

His life was saved by missing the rocks and striking the water. He searched through the rocks in the darkness until he found the body of his daughter. He was unable to move it up the face of the steep cliff, and fearing that the waves would carry it out into the lake, he held it in his arms all night.

In the morning he was successful in attracting the attention of the crew of a passing tug, who rescued him and carried the dead girl to a landing place. The father was almost insane as the result of his fearful night's vigil.

BANK CASHIER GOES TO PRISON

A. H. Butler of Lockport Gives Up Fight to Escape Penitentiary.

Joliet, Ill., Nov. 16.—Andrew H. Butler, former cashier of the Lockport Exchange bank, has given up the fight to escape imprisonment and has entered the penitentiary to serve an indefinite term. Butler was indicted for receiving deposits, knowing the bank to be insolvent, and was convicted. The motion for a new trial was overruled.

A GRAND SHOWING OF

The Lewis Knitting Co.'s Underwear

HERE FOR THURSDAY.

WE shall have on display tomorrow full lines of the Lewis Underwear and we cordially invite you to call here and inspect the same. Besides the Lewis "full fashioned" Underwear which we shall show, we shall have complete lines of their medium priced garments which sell in the Union Suits at $3.00, $4.00 and $5.00 each.

The constant demand for Ribbed Undergarments better made and finished than the ordinary goods which are now on the market have induced the Lewis Knitting Co. to manufacture a line of Underwear which they style the "Janesville," having all the strong features of style and fitting that their most expensive garments have and still can be sold at a popular price. They are made in Siltrine, Wool and Lisle with the greatest care and attention to the details which go to make beautifully finished goods and which are also form fitting. In Popular Priced Goods, as a rule, these very necessary small points—if comfort, neatness of dress and durability are taken in consideration—are sacrificed. Not so with the Janesville Underwear.

WE shall be prepared tomorrow to take special measurements, so if you are hard to fit and find it necessary to have your Underwear made to your order. We urge you to call tomorrow and let us take your measure as we cannot promise garments made from special measurements under ten days or two weeks.

Tomorrow also occurs the sale of all kinds of Underwear in our stock which sell ordinarily at 50c to $1.50 for each garment at a reduction in price.
